

The author, Brian Quistorff, declares that he has no relevant or material financial interests that relate to the research described in this paper, “Economic Measurement Lost in a Random Forest?: A Case Study of Employment Data”. The data used in this research are proprietary, come from a payroll processing company, and are subject to a non-disclosure agreement. The company requested to review the results of the study prior to their dissemination to ensure that the confidentiality of the data is not unintentionally compromised.